Mr. Mills came home from work when Mrs. Mills had forced the children to sleep and she was actually tired of this. Mr. Mills was not at home then to help her except at weekends.

Mr. Mills thought he was a good storyteller but the way he told stories was really miserable. However, he decided that if he told children stories when they went to bed, it would help them relax and little by little they would go to sleep.

He did this every Saturday and Sunday night until he heard his small son saying to his small sister, "Do you think he will stop telling the story if we close our eyes?"

It was getting late and I knew that if I did not find a hotel soon, I would have to sleep on a park bench or in a police station. I had been searching for three hours and was feeling so hungry that I decided to go into the little restaurant I had passed some moments before.

The restaurant did not seem very inviting. The windows looked as if they had not been cleaned for months. On one of them, there was a notice saying "Cook Wanted". These words were badly printed on a piece of paper. A little man in a coat much too big for him stood looking at it for several minutes. At last, he decided and opened the door and immediately I went inside after him.
